

Andrew Hewitt

"Success in college isn't measured by grades, degrees or distinctions. It is measured by how well you prepare for what is to follow."

Andrew Hewitt took a unique approach to college that earned him much more than a Bachelor of Management degree. As a student he studied and worked in the United States, Canada, Europe and Asia—visiting over 30 cities across 13 countries. Among other initiatives, he competed internationally in entrepreneurship competitions, facilitated nation-wide student leader conferences, and founded and led a number of student clubs. At age 20 he had been recruited by over a dozen companies interested in training him for executive positions, yet turned them all down to pursue his passion for helping students.

In his last year of studies Andrew landed a major publishing deal to co-author The Power of Focus for College Students; an extension of the international bestseller The Power of Focus, which was co-authored by the creators of Chicken Soup for the Soul. Now, at 23 years of age, Andrew is a bestselling author, passionate speaker on the college circuit, the youngest faculty member for Trump University, a trained Dream Discovery Coach and an avid real estate investor.

His primary focus is expanding Focused Futures Inc., a business he co-founded with partner Luc d'Abadie to help students discover their true potential and launch themselves into successful careers. Andrew's dream is to help induce a massive change in the way students are educated, so that it becomes common practice to equip and empower students to live life fully and to pursue their dreams.
